The ease-of-use, ease-of-transportation and high performance of our systems make them suitable for everything from broadband tactical communication to strategic reach back.

COMBAT PROVEN

Our satellite communications equipment is designed to meet military standards in operation, performance, and ruggedness. Our products are combat proven and have been used during most conflicts during the last decade. Examples include Operation Iraqi Freedom, Enduring Freedom in Afghanistan and Operation Allied Force in Former Yugoslavia.

We have designed our equipment to be compact, easy to operate and rugged. Set up and tear down is intuitive and requires no tools. The construction is rugged enough to survive the harshest climates.

SWE-DISH satellite antennas have been assigned military nomenclature by the US Department of Defense. They have also been certified by the US Defense Information Systems Agency (DISA), have received a FCC license and been type approved by Intelsat, Eutelsat, EuropeStar and Hispasat among others.

Our military equipment is divided into three main categories: Drive-Away systems, Fly-Away systems, and small portable Suitcase terminals.

TOTAL SUPPORT

Many companies can sell you equipment - the true measure of world class equipment providers is how well they service and support their equipment after it is fielded by the user.

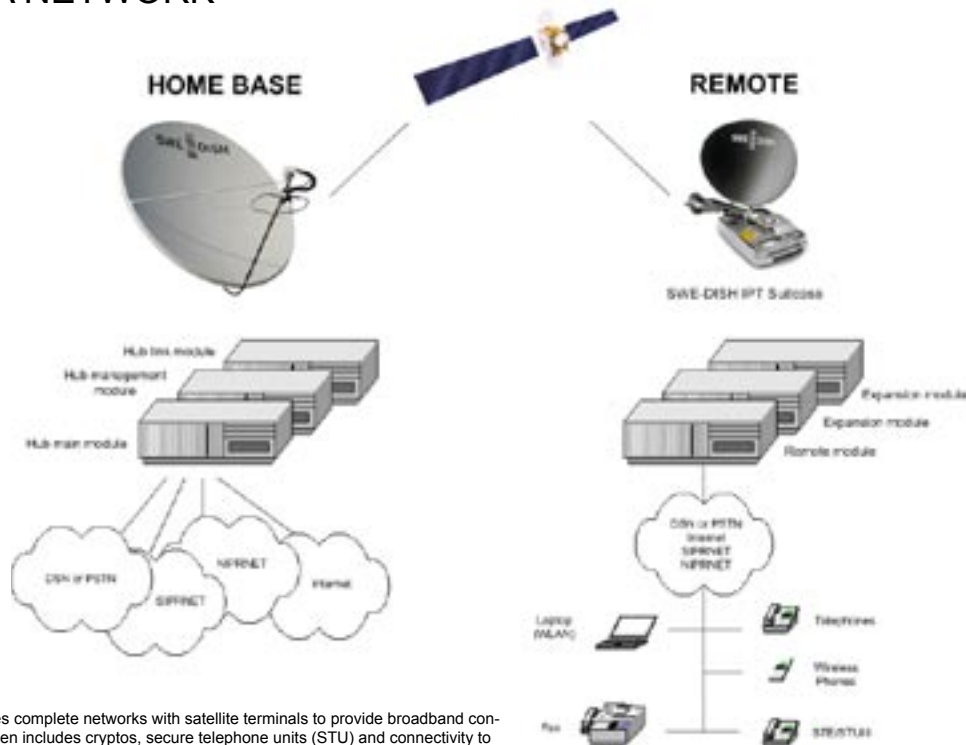

For us, complete life-cycle support is not just a saying; it is at the core of our philosophy. From the outset, our equipment is designed to minimize wear and tear and to provide an exceptionally high MTBF/MTBR. But service and support doesn't stop there, from our outstanding training curriculum (both at our facilities and on-site), to our spares and maintenance concept, to the accessibility of our technical support staff (by phone, internet, or in-person at our facility or on-site with the user), we provide true end-to-end support.

We believe that the user's mission is critical. We are proud of our users and we show our dedication to them through our service and support.
